

Grow Your Interests With WCU

WCU Open Clubs April '24

By offering an affordable and mainly free, effective provision our aim is to engage local partners and create appropriate services to further develop the projects' ability to assist attendees' in experiencing a WIDER RANGE OF EDUCATIONAL opportunities.

Our Project facilitators regularly transport students to activities across the contributors while using their own skills and experience to provide coaching and well being opportunities. through facilitation of clubs.

This year is the perfect opportunity for students to grow an interest in a new hobby or field with us at WCU.

"The CU sessions I have attended have included children from different age groups, from different cultures and religions and all have spoken very highly of the groups."
Leila

"Westminster CU is taking an important step for improving the recycling rates and clearing public spaces of litter by starting the A Future without Rubbish project."

Schools want activities that are relevant to the curriculum, that meet their needs, that are high quality in terms of planning and communication as well as delivery, and that ultimately benefit their young people's life chances.

Best practice from consultations with schools highlight the importance of accessing local cultural provision, incorporating teacher development into activities, school-school collaborations, and leveraging funding from various sources.

At Westminster's Children's University we are continually seeking new partners and sponsors to assist in providing quality extracurricular opportunities for the often underprivileged youth of Westminster. Our goal is to recruit and engage providers to inspire aspirations and create resilience building opportunities for our young people.
